By Jason Ross - 44 Comments - When you combine the benefits of a fuel cell with the low overall energy profile of micro-hydropower plants, you get a very efficient system. These micro-hydro plants are typically powered by the pressure of moving water, and their efficiency depends upon the kinetic energy of the water. Even if you're not ready to commit to the full installation of a small-scale hydropower unit, building a backyard power plant is easier than you might think. Just by installing a 10-kW "power wheel" for some roof-top solar panels (for free), you can create energy at any time of the year. The development of battery technologies has been putting new emphasis on energy storage. Although lithium ion batteries have been around for about 30 years, they were only recently introduced to the energy storage market. They are the perfect sustainable energy solution for the forest because they are efficient and have a high power density. The Isak Gero 570a42141b
