Every computer or mobile device comes with a web browser, and many are designed to run two or more web browsers at once. Some mobile browsers, like Safari for iOS, are only meant to be used for a single browsing session. No matter how it's meant to be used, the web browser is designed to display web pages that you've visited, or your favorite sites, by connecting directly to the internet. What if you want to create a website? A new web browser, or website builder, can be used to create your own web pages. These websites are designed in a way so that they can be viewed with any standard web browser. A web browser is software designed for viewing web pages. Websites are made up of content, which may be text, images or videos, that are organized on the web page. The web browser displays and interprets the content from the web page, or website. For the web browser to function, it must also be able to connect directly to the internet. This is referred to as Internet connectivity. This type of connectivity is often included by default with web browsers on computers and mobile devices. That's the type of connectivity this tutorial will focus on. The web browser generally functions in two ways: to retrieve web pages from the internet or to create new web pages. Web pages can be retrieved by web browsers through a technique known as URL protocol or web addressing. URLs are simple identifiers to a website. For example, there's the domain name, like the domain name for apple.com. Every domain name has a top level domain (TLD), which determines the language or dialect used to define the domain name in the domain name. For example,.com would be an English language domain name, while.fr would be a French language domain name. For example, you can visit the sites cnn.com, apple.com, abc.com, and cheesecake.com and all the sites will be the same web pages. is a simple identifier to a website. For example, there a681f4349e

(AP Photo/Muhammed Muheisen) JERUSALEM — Thousands of Palestinians from the Gaza Strip joined a demonstration Wednesday in the West Bank against what they say is Israel's harsh treatment of Palestinians. Hundreds of thousands of Palestinian protesters have been taking part in demonstrations across the Palestinian territories since late December, mainly in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and east Jerusalem. The protesters were demanding that the Palestinian government restore services in east Jerusalem after Israel cut water, electricity and sewage infrastructure in the city, and that they transfer their tax money to Gaza. Palestinians also want to prevent what they describe as Israeli impunity after the fatal shooting of more than 30 protesters by Israeli forces at the Gaza border. On Tuesday, Israel said it was ending its two-year blockade of the Hamas-run Gaza Strip. Thousands of Palestinians are expected to join celebrations in the crowded Gaza Strip that will include a display of resistance to the Israeli siege and a call for reconciliation with Hamas, which has been at war with the rival Palestinian faction Fatah since 2007. Hamas official Shaaban al-Hawari said the celebrations would proceed as scheduled, but warned Gaza may impose a few days of mourning on Thursday and Friday for those who have died during the protests. The protests are taking place during the Muslim holy month of Ramadan, which begins Thursday. Follow us on Please enable JavaScript to view the comments powered by Disqus. Q: Updating inner hash table in java Suppose I have a class A which has an inner hash table. If I have Hashtable h = A.get() and I want to change an element value in A.h, how do I do that? A: You can't. You can add an appropriate set and then use h.containsKey(key) to check if it's a match; and if so, update the element via h.get(key). If that's the end of it, though, the question isn't clear. Q: GitHub Pages - 404 Not Found I'm trying to use Github for my website, I've been following the instructions here: for the GitHub Pages section. I successfully setup my repo and added the *.github.io domain name and the GitHub Pages website, everything seems to be working fine. However when I go to the website I get 404 not found. When I go to the GitHub website I get the following: Could you help me please? A: If you've setup the domain name correctly and the path is correct you should be able to just enter your domain name in the address bar. If not, that would be because your site files are either not in the correct location or not accessible by other users. Check that the following is correct: Your content folder: All your source code files (*.html, *.js, *.css, etc.) and folder structure (images, fonts, etc.) should be in the same folder as your index.html file, so all your files should be something like www.domain.com/content/ then your index.html should be like www.domain.com/content/index.html. A public folder that has all your images, fonts, etc. A robots.txt file that tells search engine crawlers not to index your site. Then you should be able to enter your domain name into a browser and visit www.domain.com/ or www.domain.com without the leading slash.
