The phone, which will be named after Apple's training program, is expected to be a 4-inch model with a resolution of 960 x 640 and offer only basic functionality. Apple has long been interested in improving the skills of its hardware engineering staff, which has been traditionally responsible for the interface and hardware design of its iPhones and iPads. "There are only a few people in the world who can create a revolutionary new interface for computers," said Steve Jobs, Apple's co-founder and chief executive. "But there are thousands of people who can create an amazing gaming interface." Apple last week began hosting a two-month-long "app camp" program to help iPhone and iPod Touch developers with their trade and to teach them how to create their first iPhone apps. Apple's education website Macworld received 250,000 applications from budding developers.Q: Как изменить цвет текста и подписи? Не могу понять, как это делать Как изменить свой цвет текста,
