How to use the router. download aÂ .Ramat Aviv, Israel – After the launch of its first ever UAV, the small Tel-Hai-based startup EHDA (Exo-Hazardous Defense) is moving on to more ambitious objectives, with its latest venture - a UAV for wildlife observers. In a sharp departure from the way of doing things, the company has made use of social media and crowd sourcing to develop its idea, and has taken its pitch to the public, enlisting financial support from the startup crowdfunding site, Seedmatch. Mousa Mustapha Ali, CEO, EHDA, told ISRAEL21c, "The company's thinking is that you take something that is a technology, an existing technology, and you turn it into a social enterprise. We came to the conclusion that we will use the same technology and make it social, to produce a tool that people can use for social purposes. We are using the UAV technology to explore, to communicate and to alert." The company's first model will be an inexpensive UAV that can be taken apart, for easy transport and set-up, and which can be operated by a three year old. According to Mustapha Ali, EHDA is not responding to an unmet need or need that is not being met, but that its UAV could fill a niche. "It's a technology solution for a niche that needed the most, and can be the best solution." The UAV is a perfect example of this principle, he explains. "The UAV is very cheap, very easy to build, very easy to assemble, and very small.” Looking at it from the perspective of the social needs of society, instead of asking people what their needs are, the new approach from the company looks at the other way round, and works out what the technology needs to do. This is precisely how the company developed its idea. The UAV project was adopted by
