A new report from the “Treasury Select Committee” published today exposes the true cost of the UK’s military intervention in Syria to be at least £2.4 billion, not to mention, more than £5.6 billion. In addition, that is more than four times what is projected to be spent on the Trident nuclear programme. For a bit of context, just over £46 million has been spent on airstrikes against ISIS-held territory in Syria. The Costs of Britain’s Syrian Intervention, conducted by the “Committee of Public Accounts” (“PAC”) based on the “Criminal Finance Act 2015” and “Permanent Service Indemnity Act 1939”, could be a little dry for some, but for anyone working in the public sector, it is a sobering read. It is an oversight that information on the UK’s current war effort must be kept out of reach of the civil service due to the Official Secrets Act. The report also calls for the English “Offences of Access to Official Secrets” to be updated so they can include the modern digital world. Let’s unpack the report: £1,071,400 for the RAF’s “tactical transport aircraft”, which can be converted into a gunship £207,200 for “briefings and advice to US Department of Defense officials” £1,000,000 “to a wholly-owned subsidiary” £761,504 for support “in providing training to pilots from the United States and Australia to fly RAF aircraft” £1,000,000 for the “organisation and delivery of support for the RAF’s work in Iraq” £1,000,000 for “ongoing ‘intelligence liaison and assistance’” £1,000,000 for a “contractual study” £1,000,000 “for the provision of ‘support services to a wholly-owned subsidiary’” £786,880 for “operational costs” £756,000 for “contracts and related costs” £73,300 for “station accommodation and associated costs” £72,000 for “telephone”

Arkansas AG Elaine Brooks Announces More Than $150,000 in Campaign Finance Charges Jan 20, 2016 Statewide News Arkansas Attorney General Leslie Rutledge and Representative Kim Hendren of Springdale announce $150,000 in charges related to campaign finance violations. Posted on Jan. 20, 2016 Press Release Attorney General Leslie Rutledge announced Monday that her office has filed seven charges against multiple defendants alleging violations of state election laws, specifically multiple violations of contribution limits. The charges and accompanying chart summarize more than $150,000 in reported campaign violations. The charges result from an investigation conducted by the Attorney General’s Office into the alleged illegal contributions, the scheme by which the alleged contributions were reported and, in some cases, accepted and/or disbursed, and the amounts of money allegedly obtained as a result of the scheme. The Attorney General’s Office filed charges against three individuals and one PAC. The charges were filed in connection with separate elections held in 2014 in Pulaski County, District 30 in Lonoke County, and in Garland County, District 14. According to the charges, defendant Erica Vanover, of 710 Carlin in Fayetteville, is alleged to have improperly accepted at least three contributions totaling $10,000. Defendant Ford Hampton, of 1108 E. Main in Fayetteville, is alleged to have made two contributions totaling $2,800. Defendant Eddie L. Davis, of 2301 N. Fifth in Fayetteville, is alleged to have made two contributions totaling $2,800. As a result of the Attorney General’s Office’s investigation, defendant CMI PAC, a political action committee, filed reports and paid at least $150,000 in campaign contributions between August 2014 and January 2015. During that same period, defendant CMI paid $4,650 to defendant Vanover and $2,200 to defendant Hampton. The Attorney General’s Office alleges that $1,000 of those contributions was deposited in defendant Davis’s campaign account. According to CMI’s report, it has paid more than $400,000 to candidates, of which approximately $100,000 was disbursed to defendants Hampton and Davis and other defendants. In addition to the campaign finance violations, the Attorney General’s Office has filed charges in Circuit Court for first-degree theft. The charges allege that a major donor, who is not a defendant in
