In March 2016, Autodesk was acquired by San Francisco-based software company The Blackstone Group for USD 50.00 per share, making The Blackstone Group the largest shareholder in Autodesk. At the time of the acquisition, Autodesk's share price was USD 44.63. At the time of writing, the share price was USD 48.00. The acquisition of Autodesk was announced on September 14, 2016. Contents show] Background Autodesk was founded in 1982 by Frank Winters, Bjarke Schmalling, and John Walker. Frank Winters was the primary founder of the company and Bjarke Schmalling was later hired as CTO, and John Walker was hired as head of business development. Autodesk's first product, named AutoDraft, was a desktop drawing program for microcomputers in 1984. In 1986, the company released AutoCAD, a desktop CAD program for microcomputers running on Motorola 68000 microprocessors. AutoCAD was then one of the first CAD programs available for the desktop, with most other CAD programs for desktop computers being of the mainframe or minicomputer variety. Because AutoCAD is a smaller product that takes up less space on a computer, it is more readily accessible to the home user. AutoCAD was originally released for the 68000 processor, but was subsequently ported to the PowerPC. In 1990, the first version of AutoCAD for the Macintosh was released. In 1991, the first version of AutoCAD for Windows was released, allowing users to interact with AutoCAD on a Microsoft Windows platform. In 1999, Autodesk introduced an extension to the Command Line Interface (CLI), which was based on AutoLisp. In 1998, Autodesk acquired GRIDDOC, a software company based in San Jose, California. GRIDDOC was merged into Autodesk. In June 2001, Autodesk released AutoCAD LT, which is a version of AutoCAD intended for the entry-level market. AutoCAD LT is an attempt to capture a niche in the CAD market that was previously occupied by the standard, more advanced CAD programs such as AutoCAD and GRAPHISOFT INC. CAD Software's flagship product is AutoCAD, which is mainly used for architectural and engineering-related drafting. However, AutoCAD LT is mainly used by Architects and Interior designers who have very little engineering experience.

Category:2001 softwareQ: Sorting a dictionary by count of the values in the dictionary I have a dict of the type {label: count of occurrence of that label}. I would like to sort my dict by the value. Here is an example: Dict = {'a': 1, 'b': 1, 'c': 3, 'd': 5} And my desired output would be: Dict = {'d': 5, 'c': 3, 'b': 1, 'a': 1} I'm new to Python so any help would be appreciated. A: You can use collections.Counter which by default sorts in decreasing order.
from collections import Counter Dict = {'a': 1, 'b': 1, 'c': 3, 'd': 5}
print(Counter(Dict)) # Counter({'d': 5, 'c': 3, 'b': 1, 'a': 1}) If you want to sort by the key: from collections import Counter Dict = {'a': 1, 'b': 1, 'c': 3, 'd': 5} print(Counter(Dict).most_common()) # [('d', 5), ('c', 3), ('b', 1), ('a', 1)] South Africa women's cricket team in Australia in 1999–2000 The South Africa women's ca3bfb1094

Install a Firmware, like (It's a small program like config-manager) Open ac-config-manager, then the plugin using this command: `sudo./ac-config-manager` This step is only needed if the device is not booting correctly, if it boots correctly you can skip this step. Go to `/usr/share/ac-config-manager/plugins/config-manager/acad/acad.conf` and comment out: `sudoEdit(/etc/acpi/acad.conf, [Install] ActivatePlugin=acad)` Save the file. Go to `/etc/acpi/` and enable `sudoEdit(/etc/acpi/, [Enable] ActivatePlugins=acad)` Save the file. Reboot the computer

Hollywood studios are facing a copyright row over the Oscars that could scupper this year's Oscars ceremony. A judge in the US has found that the organisers of the Oscars have failed to properly police its website following allegations that those involved had copied movie clips from YouTube. In a judgment issued on Friday, US district judge Susan Oakes found that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and the members of its organisation had misused their copyright in the clips. The ruling means that the Oscars will have to find a new source for its movie clips. The judge was also critical of the Academy's failure to properly respond to inquiries about copyright infringement – a failure she said was “unreasonable and unprecedented”. She awarded a total of $500,000 in legal fees to the parties involved, which amounts to around £300,000. “The Academy is not subject to copyright protection,” she said. “Its members have no right to commercially exploit their work. They can only perform, display and otherwise make available their works in the public domain.” In her findings, Oakes said the Academy had copied clips from other websites and distributed them without permission. Among the clips that it had copied were scenes from the 2012 film The Artist, The Social Network, 2012 and Burlesque, an award-winning 2011 film by director Christina Voros. In a ruling in December 2012, Oakes said the Academy had “obtained a copy” of Burlesque, but did
