The Surgery has been busy at times with mixed reception, but what with the hard work and the consistency of my hard work I am now on the brink of changing my clientele. I have always prided myself on the fact that my work is generally slow and the long term relationships I have built with my clients have been vital to the success of the practice. In the past year I have deliberately built up relationships with my regular clients to make sure that there is not too much of a handover on site. This has meant that for a while I had few clients within the surgery, but I am now in the process of changing this. In the short to medium term I will be concentrating on my regular clientele and those who are looking for urgent treatment. This will then allow me to build up my book of business which has been sadly flat for a while now. I am currently looking to add an assistant to the surgery, which I will need to remain within the area. I would ideally like to see a female as my wife is also working in the dental field and it would be great for the family to be involved. I am happy to do everything from filling teeth, adhesives to orthodontics, filling, metal, crown and last and least and everything in between. By allowing myself time to build this up and to allow the place to grow and evolve I have no doubt that this will be a successful operation. In the long term I am looking to develop a more general practice, by having consulting rooms at various locations in and around Middlesbrough. This will be a great opportunity for me, if things go to plan. Q: Strange object deletion behaviour If you create an object using a struct that is a member of a class
