Â ..The use of balloons to form conformal contact between a stent and a delivery balloon is known. Such conformal contact causes the stent to conform to the delivery balloon during inflation of the delivery balloon and causes the stent to conform to the body lumen during deflation of the delivery balloon. Prior stent delivery systems have required complex mechanisms to stably connect the stent to the balloon, and in the absence of such complex mechanisms, the stent has been easily movable with respect to the balloon. The stent can be damaged during such movement, reducing the reliability of the stent-delivery system and potentially leading to suboptimal placement of the stent within the body lumen. Thus, there is a need for a stent-delivery system having improved retention properties. The embodiments of the present invention described herein address this need.2013/04/07 Diode laser is a method to decrease fluid volume in watery eyes.
