Player characteristics, physical attributes, reactions and tactics are more realistic than ever before, with player skills and strengths tailored to each player type. This season's squad also features some of the most diverse and talented players the series has ever seen. From experienced veterans and younger stars to the best of the young academy talent, EA SPORTS FIFA

20 has the complete lineup of both senior and emerging football talent. Players have been created with authentic traits, behaviours and routines, giving players a more realistic touch experience in online and offline modes. FIFA 20's regular-season development update ("Autumn Update") has just been released and introduces a new improved Kicks Vol. 2, new Player Traits and Player Behaviours and other regular-season content. Kicks Vol. 2 Alongside a new MyPLAYER Guide, Kicks Vol. 2 also introduces a brand new Kicks mode that puts players in the shoes of professional or academy players before a match in real-life, simulating the pressure of the moment and challenging players to score goals as well as making the right save decisions to clinch three points. Players in Kicks mode will receive valuable feedback from coach, before completing a midweek training to prepare themselves to face the opposition, and will be ranked or rewarded for their performance in the final match, with all action and real-world behaviour translated into the game. Players are tested on the pitch in Kicks mode to see how they perform on their day-to-day footwork routines, to give them tips to improve their game. Each player will have a unique Coach's Review in Kicks mode, detailing where the player can improve or how they can play better. Player Traits

Players can now be broken down by their positions to see their skills in more detail. Players will now be able to see their attribute information, such as their ball control, stamina or speed in a more structured and visual way. Some new attributes have been added, such as strength and player type, while others have been removed, including the skin colour attribute. Many players now have a Y Rating, which reflects how effective the player is at scoring goals (1 is good, 9 is the best). Players who excel in certain attacking activities are given a defined skill rating for those activities and an overall rating. In the Team Traits and Player Behaviours menus,
