The weight and complexity of this task, however, meant that the development of the real-time gameplay would fall to the forerunning development of the game's AI. Which is why the task of building AI that works on the level of a football player fell to the talented AI developers at LGM and Evolution Studios. The result is a new version of the core A.I. that is completely new and features some serious updates and improvements. The A.I. can learn from FIFA 21 gameplay, and will be more reactive and change its tactics in response to the opposition, adapting more closely to the way players play the game. - How the A.I. works The A.I. plays a fully reactive role within FIFA 22 by learning from the actions of the players in game. This means that it will make changes to its tactics based on the players' reactions to it. - The A.I. will learn from the game's footage; can learn to adapt its tactics by watching for key moments in the game. The A.I.'s learning from gameplay was tested by simulating the FIFA 22 gameplay in a contained environment. The testing environment included a server that contained the evolution of a soccer game (analogous to an opponent) and an 'A.I.' (the A.I. in this exercise) that was able to evolve alongside it. The A.I. taught itself to become increasingly aggressive, more agile, and more defensive as the game advanced. The A.I. would learn to flank the striker, for example, when the striker had the ball and the A.I. saw that players were closing in to intercept the ball. The A.I. could then exploit the weaknesses of these players and “teach” them how to deal with this behavior. When the A.I. did this successfully, the ‘teachers’ reacted accordingly. A bonus level was added to the test server, which had a highly specific gameplay that could be scripted; a scenario was added to the A.I. that was scripted to fail. From the moment the A.I. was introduced to the scenario, the A.I. was forced to change its tactics, showing how much it could learn. The A.I.’s ability to learn was designed such that when the A.I. was put

CONTROLS, CONTROLS AND MORE CONTROLS! Every player movement has been improved, bringing the difference to life like never before. Sliding and pulling are now even more accurate, rushing runs feel as sharp as you'd expect them to, while you will be given the extra control to drag-deflect and perform the same moves you've always known and loved in FIFA. Controls are now instantly universal with button placement now very responsive even with smaller gamepads, and you can even see where your player-maneuver moves will take you on the pitch, by holding down the JOG button, the game now lets you choose what direction your dribble will take from the moment you press the button. AI is improved, but still not perfect. Enemy players are now more intelligent than ever in their understanding of your movements and the smart AI opponent will always be aware of your intentions, making them be more aware of what you do and how they play the game. Optimized for TV screens, FIFA 19's 2K high-definition TV mode brings high-definition visuals to the TV screens of the most demanding football fans. On consoles, FIFA 19 will support up to 4K resolution on select display technologies and players will be able to use the new 3D touch to take the perfect corner or penalty kick. EMOTIONS, PASSION, AND CHALLENGES! He passes, he scores, he scores, he scores. FIFA 19 evolves the passing, dribbling, shooting and tackling systems, bringing the difference to life like never before. The improved physics give users more control, a first for the series, enabling the player to control the ball more than ever before. When controlling a player's dribble, the player can now perform a "dribble and turn" move that sends the ball on a trajectory that can be controlled precisely. Improvements have also been made to the fighting systems, giving more control and finesse to players. Real-World Foot pain has been taken into consideration, adding an extra element of realism and as a result, the player can now more easily stretch and recover during the game. "We love the idea that we could finally use 3D touch, the new 3D pointing function, or any other new touch feature in our game, so we worked closely with developers to make sure there's actually a player who could use it," said Steve Cop
