Despite the basic premise of HyperMotion, EA Sports and DICE have gone all out to add as many realistic elements to the game as possible. “While many of the moving parts are now technology-enhanced, we could not stop players from achieving their true potential,” said Craig Cole, Senior Producer at DICE. “For example, players still must be good athletes to keep up with their movement and have the speed, touch and timing to use their skills.” Gameplay in FIFA 22 will take into account ball and player dynamics, including how an uncooperative ball affects gameplay, player speed, ball trajectory, interceptions and more. More than three dozen new animations and features are on the way this year, including: the ability to jump up quickly and take a counter-attack shot; improvements to shooting, dribbling and passing; more intelligence behind skill moves; ability to pick out and shoot at out-of-reach players; and the ability to slide and pace vertically as well as horizontally. For more on FIFA 22, be sure to check out GAME Magazine's 3D Preview. FILED JUL 19 2012 MOLLY C. DWYER, CLERK
