Unfortunately, this doesn't work: $ awk '/.*/ { print $1}' data.txt Of course there are more elegant ways to do it, see, for instance, but this works. A: You can try this: sed -n '2p' data.txt | grep "" | sed's///' | cut -f1 | awk '{print $1}' How? sed -n '2p' data.txt Using a '2' expression to show only lines, in this case, the second line, and stores them in the buffer. grep "" The grep will filter for lines with ". This result will be stored in the buffer. sed's///' Uses the regex "", to eliminate these lines. So only the last line will be saved. cut -f1 Then, using cut, to get the first field awk '{print $1}' Then, awk will print the first field of the lines. EDIT As @i-pascal says, we can do it in a single line: sed -n 2p data.txt | grep "" | sed's///' | cut -f1 | awk

'{print $1}' which will print
