RamVille was created for a special application. It does not work as a standard Web portal. It provides you with dynamic information pages without any charts or data tables. RamVille runs in several languages (French, German, English, Spanish, Italian, Russian,...). The database is structured as a relational database and its software library contains a JavaBean for each data. That allows you to give, implement and integrate applications without writing any code. Namibia Police The Namibian Police Force (Namibian Police: Afrikanische Polizei Pönåshendlanîn) is a uniformed police service with jurisdiction in Namibia. It is organised into districts, the Operational Area Southeast (OASE) and the Operational Area Western (OAW). The force has its headquarters in Windhoek, the capital city. History When Namibia was a South-West Africa protectorate under the German Empire, the police service was called South-West Africa Polizei. After the capture of Germany and the subsequent rise of the independent South Africa, the then Police Department under the South-West Africa administration was re-organised into a separate police force under the South Africa Police. Following independence and the re-organisation of the Namibian Police Force, the South-West Africa Polizei still exists, formally as an unarmed auxiliary force.
