I have the following tables: excerpt table: PK int not null Primary Key Foreign Key references n_words(id) word table: PK int not null Primary Key Foreign Key references n_words(id) n_words table: PK int not null Primary Key Foreign Key references n_words(id) I created an index on the n_words.word table with: id(PK) and word.id(index column) I also created an index on the excerpt.word table with: id(PK) and word.id(index column) Question: Can I use the index on the n_words.word table in the query? ex: SELECT word.word FROM n_words.word JOIN excerpt.word ON word.id=excerpt.word.id WHERE word.id = 1 A: The most important thing to look at when you're trying to use indexes is cardinality. If you have a 1:N or N:M relationship and you don't have an index on the FK column, chances are that the queries are doing the following: SELECT w.* FROM word w WHERE w.id = 1 FROM n_words w JOIN excerpt e ON w.id = e.wordid The query above has no indexes on it, and it can't use an index on n_words.word since it doesn't know what value to start at when it hits that FK. In this case, you should simply create a separate index on n_words.word like so: CREATE NONCLUSTERED
