If you reach this limit of hits during the day, you will lose your one free bonus view for the day.The present invention relates to a device for preventing a material, which is conveyed by a conveyer, from falling down on a floor in a processing machine, e.g. an injection molding machine which supplies a pre-molded plastic article to an injection molding machine. Generally, the hopper of an injection molding machine is installed with a rotating cylinder, and the material to be processed, e.g. a plastic material, is supplied through the inner side of the rotating cylinder. On the other hand, a floor is installed to the back side of the injection molding machine for receiving the plastics processed therein. When the rotating cylinder rotates downward, a portion of the plastics supplied may fall down on the floor, resulting in a conveyer malfunction. To prevent the plastics supplied from falling down on the floor, Japanese Patent Application (OPI) No. 134322/81
