Let's say I have a function: //This is just an example. You probably have more logic function myFunc(){ let text = 'Daft Punk' } This function is inside of another function: //Defining the whole function function otherFunc(){ let text = 'Empiricus' myFunc() } Now, in this case, what's the use of this inside the myFunc? since it's in the same function. Another example: //Defining the whole function function otherFunc(){ let text = 'Empiricus' this.myFunc() } Does it mean that I have to use it this way or am I doing something wrong? I've looked through many tutorials, but I can't seem to find any explanation of this question. A: Accessing this inside the context of a function generally means, that the function is a method of a constructor. If you want to use this with a function declared outside the context of a constructor, you should define a variable to store it. //Defining the whole function function otherFunc(){ let text = 'Empiricus' let self = this self.myFunc() } function myFunc(){ let text = 'Daft Punk' } otherFunc() A: Your first example: function otherFunc() { let text = 'Empiricus'; myFunc(); } isn't really doing anything. It's just creating a variable, assigning a value to it, and then immediately discarding it. There's no point in that, unless the code is trying to work around some weird API; I wouldn't expect to run into that situation, but it could be. Your second example would mean you have a separate scope with both the myFunc() call and the text assignment effects of pro- and anti-viral factors on interferon-beta-induced antiviral activity in the human thymoma cell line, TE-1. A human thymoma cell line, TE-1, was infected with human immunodeficiency virus type 1 (HIV-1) and its antiviral activity was examined by the inhibition of cytopathic effect (CPE) induced in its uninfected neighbor cell lines by interferon-beta (IFN-beta). Although the IFN-beta-treated TE-1 cells showed significant anti-viral activity against various retroviruses, the uninfected neighbor cells in co-culture with IFN-beta-treated TE-1 cells were not protected from them. DNA sequences of beta-globin locus in TE-1 cells were also analyzed and no deletions or duplications were observed. Furthermore, these cells did not produce beta-globin mRNA in the presence of IFNbeta. These results suggested that some factors present in IFN-beta-treated TE-1 cells block the anti-viral effect

Jason Crow and Nick Harmer are the sorts of guys who are able to pick up a pair of guitars and construct a set of songs that sound a lot like their own voice. Those songs sound real, you can just tell. They're the type that you listen to and you think: "Yeah, I could write that." This two-disc retrospective of the band's career sounds like Crow's own voice, and certainly doesn't sound anything like a big-label producer or producer's producer: this is Crow's talent on display and, for anyone who's a fan of rock 'n' roll, it's the sort of album that will be on your permanent rotation. This is the band's first full-length release on a major label, and it's really
