I just made StrangeRuler, which is a web-based design tool. Here's a few reasons why: 1\ It's free. Free for everybody. 2\ You don't have to have the latest version of any browser, or have a registered account on Behance. 3\ It's dead simple to use. I've tried to make it dead simple, and put a lot of effort into the intuitiveness. 4\ There is a two-way flow. You can edit a design, and then see how it looks live. 5\ I think it's been a while since a web tool has been made that I could wholeheartedly recommend. 6\ I'm really excited about it, and I'm hoping to get feedback. The book is divided into eight chapters, covering myths from the origins of man, peace, and the nature of war, to the invention of the aeroplane and the working class, and the conclusion, from which the book takes its title, that "information is the greatest force in the world". The arguments are not particularly
