Hybrid polymeric nanocarriers for drug delivery: recent advances in applications and strategies. In recent years, a number of drug carriers have been designed and developed for site-specific delivery of drugs, including polymeric nanoparticles, liposomes, and polymeric micelles. Along with these conventional delivery systems, hybrid polymeric nanocarriers comprising a variety of synthetic polymers or their biopolymers and even other nanocarriers have been made and widely explored for enhanced drug delivery. These hybrid systems offer many advantages, including controlled release of cargoes, long circulation and decreased cytotoxicity as a result of their biocompatible nature, but also introduce new challenges in terms of the production and characterization of the nanocarriers.

These nanocarriers also show promise in clinical applications for the treatment of many diseases including cancer, cardiovascular, and neurological disorders. Herein, we review recent advances in various hybrid polymeric nanocarriers and discuss their application in cancer therapy. Q:

Approximation of a function I have the following question: Let  $f$  be a complex function on  $\mathbb{C}^$ , the punctured plane, analytic on  $\{z: |z| > 1\}$ . Suppose that the following holds:  $\exists k \in \mathbb{N}, \exists C_k > 0$  such that  $\forall z \in \mathbb{C}^ \setminus \{f(z)\}$  Jonathan Gilliland Jonathan Gilliland (born 6 February 1974) is an English retired professional footballer who played as a defender.
