The technology was developed by a group of pioneering software engineers at SIE London Studio, combining their deep experience in our in-house developed title engine technology with new, proprietary concepts from our partners at EA Sports. HyperMotion Technology expands the scope of gameplay in FIFA by enabling countless new gameplay possibilities to be created based on the new data. New Features Team-Based Tactics: Seamlessly switch between attacking and defensive tactics on the fly to counter opponents. Attackers change to the counter-attacking positions the moment they get the ball back to strengthen and create opportunities. Defenders also adapt tactically to create advantageous situations for themselves based on the opposition's attack. Player Switches: React instantly when facing pressure or receiving a long pass. Switch to the flank or drop back to defend. Customise your defensive tactics by activating more aggressive forward-focused defensive AI behaviors to gain momentum and momentum. Direct Control - Offense: Real-life footwork and shooting mechanics are reflected in the game and player behaviour is even more fluid and reactive. Once again, every dribble is tracked in real-time, allowing for more fluid controls and unpredictable reactions. Direct Control - Defense: With every tackle is detected, the ball moves towards the nearest players. This information is then used to dynamically create defensive behavior on the fly based on the opposition's positioning and how the players move on the pitch. Explosive Moves: Players are quick to make the correct decisions, react to defensive movements and can change direction on the spot with full 360° freedom. This results in dynamic gameplay and the ability to evade pressure at speed. Precision Dribbling: Players are able to make quick decisions and dribble at speed without fear of being punished for their actions. This allows players to play fast and express themselves freely through dribbling, passing and shooting. Midfield Agility: Players are placed in slightly more defensive positions to prevent them from accessing more open space. This helps to create more fluid movement in the centre of the pitch but on the downside does weaken attacks that are reliant on fast and skillful forwards. Ball Recovery: Players are placed in more defensive positions and controlled more like a defender than a midfielder. This can help to create more balance between possession and defence.
