To explore the kinetic mechanism of the methylation of thiopurine metabolite in Chinese people by using TPMT genotyping as a biomarker to evaluate the activity of the conjugation. Samples of erythrocytes were collected from 28 healthy blood donors with matching activity assay of TPMT. Routine analyses of the thiopurine metabolites 6-MP, 6-TGN and 6-MMP were performed. Enzymatic kinetics assays were conducted in 96-well microplates for each donor, and the reaction rates were fitted to a simple mathematical model: [formula: see text]. The results of the kinetic analysis showed that the Michaelis constant (K_m) of TPMT for 6-TGN was much higher than that of 6-MP. The activities of
