
Thandor - Die Invasion PC ISO _BEST_

thandor: die invasion is a real time strategy game that is played in a first-person view. the player builds and expands his underground city and military facilities to gain power and/or revenge for his people. the game features four different difficulties, and two game modes (free play and campaign) with four campaigns each. first of all, thandor has a single map for each campaign, and each campaign is just as boring as the last. you'll spend so much time just trying to figure out what to do next that your patience is bound to wear thin. an interesting note is that you can cycle through campaigns in the order of best to worst (one campaign that you have to build up to), but you are stuck with the same map layout no matter what. another problem is that this game is very unforgiving and is best played on a single-player skirmish. to save time, i recommend playing thandor with at least a couple of friends, or at least with a couple of buddies on the same machine. a third problem is that the game's single-player mode is boring as hell. there are no ai opponents, and the single map is just the same over and over again. you'll be making a couple of hundred units just to get across the map and keep them alive. and finally, there's no multiplayer capability to speak of. it's not fun trying to get your friends or your enemies to cooperate in this monotonous game. the last major problem in the game is that thandor is probably the most frustrating game to find a multiplayer match for. first of all, there are only three types of maps, and i couldn't find a single one where the ai would cooperatively cooperate with you. the best way to find a multiplayer match is to take a tour of the game's options and find the multiplayer mode. unfortunately, even that isn't as simple as it should be. you have to choose your game mode and get in a battle, then you have to look for a partner. but like a pro wrestling match, your other player will be waiting to wrestle you. these two players must agree on a map, and that can be a challenge. once you agree on a map, you have to choose a multiplayer battle, but you have to play it in skirmish mode. all of this is just too much for my patience and time, especially since the game has no single-player mode.

!!! thumbs down!! you are missing the thandor: the invasion page. feel free to join the planet4 forum and let us know about it! if you have a problem with the page, please contact us at info@planet4.de.!!! thumbs down!! game description: thandor is a real time strategy game, set on the continent of thandor in the year 1511. you take on the role of one of the 14 tribes of the thandorian continent, waging war for the most valuable resources on the continent. the war itself is as much a test of your strategy as it is a test of your wits. the goal is to gather the most resources, and to conquer the other tribes, to expand your territory, and to keep them from conquering your homeland. the ultimate goal is to become the great wizard of the thandorian continent, and to take the crown as the most powerful leader on the continent. development versions of thandor are available for review on the farnel forum. the latest beta version is available as a zip file under www.farnell.de/fileadmin/software/thandor/thandor_1.0_beta_1.0.zip (size: 2.2 mb). gameplay there is very little to say about thandor's gameplay. it's another click-driven, mouse-controlled, overhead-perspective, real-time strategy game, in which the player is given a certain amount of (undefined) resources, and in which the goal is to gather as much wealth as possible, either by building production facilities, collecting resources, or conquering other settlements. apart from choosing the control method (keyboard or mouse), it's simply a matter of selecting what resources you want to collect. once you're in a multiplayer game, it's up to you to decide who plays what and who starts where, as all the players receive the same instructions and have the same resources. you must collect the necessary raw materials, and build the minimum buildings and factories to produce them. at this point, there are three different things you can do: you can build a settlement, build a new production facility, or build a military unit. building a settlement is done by clicking on the new map, selecting a new location for your city, and choosing the type of building (city, weapons, or supply). each building type can be produced by one or more factories. each factory can be produced by a single or multiple production modules. all of them are placed on the top row of the factories. the city is where you place your units, and they are moved with the mouse. you can select the units' type, and decide whether or not you want to place them on the ground or on a platform. units on platforms are less likely to be hit by attacks. in addition, you can tell units to attack with their selected weapon by clicking on them. they will then shoot all visible enemies, and that's where things get tricky. if your soldier's weapon happens to be a flame thrower, then you can't select it to shoot with. to attack with this type of weapon, you have to select a building and click on the building, and then select your soldier and click on the ground. on the other hand, if your soldier is armed with a mortar, then you can just click on the ground and select your soldier, and then click on the building to attack it with the mortar. all of this is then done on a per-unit basis, so that you can choose which units attack what, and how. the rest is all mouse and keyboard work. you'll need to choose which units you want to attack with, and which ones you want to defend. you can select these units by clicking on them, and they will then attack the enemy units on the map. you can also tell units to stay put (or move), by clicking on them again. the units attack either one or all enemy units on the map. the number of enemy units that are attacked depends on the number of units your soldier is equipped with. you can't attack more than one unit at a time.
